A Preview of Civilian Life if Crisis Brings a War.

WOMAN WORKING: PARIS

When the picture was taken, this woman employe of a gas mask factory wore a mask just for fun. But wearing masks may be serious business for her and other civilians if war comes.

RESCUING A RAID VICTIM: BERLIN

Like other major countries, Germany has built strongholds to protect people during an air raid. This cellar holds 100. School girls here are learning what to do when danger strikes.

GETTING AWAY FROM GAS: LONDON

This civilian is entering a home-made chamber that's supposed to protect eight people from gas for several hours. Some Englishmen have built bomb-proof shelters in their backyards.

SAVING THE BABY: PRAGUE

Since Czech towns are only a few minutes by air from the "enemy," all Czechs have been thoroughly drilled in air raid precautions. Other countries, too, have masks for babies.

HEAVY VOTE SEEN FOR BOND ISSUE TUESDAY

Predictions Range From 5,000 To 8,000; Total Expected To Be Under Primary.

SOLE QUESTION ON BALLOT

Absent Ballot Vote 'Unusually Large,' 113 Received Up to Noon; Deadlines Tonight.

A record registration of 19,246 voters in Mansfield points to "a heavy vote" at Tuesday's special election on the proposed $550,000 school bond issue for Mansfield, board of election officials said today, but they balked at predicting the size of the vote.

Unofficial predictions ranged from 5,000 to 8,000 votes. If as many persons go to the polls this time as in the August primary and all the newly registered electors cast their ballots, the total would climb past the 11,000 mark, it was pointed out.

Under Aug. 9 Total.

The school bond issue is the sole question to be decided Tuesday, however, and with the absence of contests for public office, observers believed the total vote would drop under the Aug. 9 total.

The bond issue attracted 9,182 votes in the Aug. 9 election, but it was pointed out that a heated battle over the Democratic nomination for governor brought out a large vote then.

A. F. Porter, election board clerk, said the 2,125 new registrations and transfers received since the August election "certainly indicated that those persons are interested in the school issue and will go to the polls Tuesday."

Midnight's Deadline.

Voters who will be out of the city Tuesday may cast their ballots at the board of elections office until 12 o'clock tonight, the deadline for voting by the absent method.

Election clerks said 113 absent and disabled voters had cast ballots today. The pre-election vote was described as "unusually large" for a special election.

Working extra hours daily, an enlarged staff at the board of elections office is preparing for next Tuesday's balloting. New registrations are being filed, address changes recorded and ballots and precinct supplies prepared for distribution Monday to all parts of the city.

Meanwhile, P. T. A. and school officials continued their campaign to acquaint voters with details of the school board's proposed $1,000,000 building program, which would provide two new junior high schools, a Senior high school addition and modernizing of the city's elemntary schools.

GIVES RULING

Judge Upholds Validity of Jury Which Indicted Davey Aids.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—The validity of a special grand jury which indicted 18 aids of Gov. Martin L. Davey on charges of violating civil service laws was upheld today by Common Pleas Judge Robert Duncan.

The 18, who included Finance Director M. Ray Allison and Jesse Gilbert, a former state legislator and now an assistant state liquor director, were accused in the indictments of soliciting or accepting campaign contributions from civil service employes.

J. Freer Bittinger, former speaker of the house of representatives and more recently a political lieutenant of Governor Davey, challenged the validity of the indictments.

He was one of the 18 named.

Calls French Ministers To Parley On Crisis; Czechs Warn They Will Fight Rather Than Accept Plebiscite On Sudetens.

Europe's Crisis at Glance

LONDON—Cabinet debates compromise plan to offer Hitler, calls French statesmen for conference.

BERLIN—Hitler uncompromisingly demands early cession of Sudetenland.

PRAGUE—Czechs proclaim they will defend every inch of their territory to the last man.

ROME—Mussolini wants acceptance of Hitler's demands.

PARIS—France believes Sudeten union with Germany will be achieved without war.

BULLETIN

BERLIN—(AP)—Konrad Henlein today proclaimed that his Sudeten German followers were "taking to arms and organizing a 'Sudeten free corps'," along the Czechoslovak-German border.

(Compiled from latest dispatches of Associated Press, United Press and International News Service.)

With its cabinet in extraordinary session today, Great Britain was reported inclined to give Germany's Adolf Hitler what he wants in Czechoslovakia.

Trying desperately to draft a compromise in the Czechoslovak crisis that would be acceptable to Hitler, when he meets again next week with England's prime minister, Neville Chamberlain, the cabinet was reported in unofficial but reliable quarters to favor accepting Hitler's terms.

It was understood that Chamberlain personally favored this course. This knowledge created astonishment among cabinet members but as the implications of a rejection of his demands became plainer some ministers wavered—and came round to his view.

Meanwhile, before taking final action, the cabinet invited Edouard Daladier, French premier, and Georges Bonnet, foreign minister, to come to London and take part in the discussion. The two French statesmen planned to fly to Britain tomorrow morning.

Prefers to Fight.

Viscount Runciman, British mediator in Czechoslovakia, is reported to have told the cabinet that Czechoslovakia would prefer to fight rather than accept a plebiscite on the cession of the Sudeten territory to Germany.

This complicated the cabinet discussion, since France is bound by military treaty to aid Czechoslovakia in case of war, and Britain would have difficulty staying out of a war that involved France.

It was out of this perplexing situation that hope was held that a suitable compromise might be drawn up—one that would satisfy Hitler and still avoid war.

The cabinet was agreed, above everything, that haste was necessary.

Hitler has set a time limit of Oct. 1, which constituted in fact an ultimatum, for acceptance almost unconditionally of his demand for incorporation of a substantial portion of the German minority area of Czechoslovakia within his Nazi reich.

While the British cabinet pondered today, the London Times, regarded as the leading voice of the more conservative element in the government, hinted cautiously that the best thing to do was accept Germany's terms.

"If conciliation has failed, as it appears to have failed," said the Times, "a decision must be taken and taken soon whether or not the Czech-German dispute demands for its solution the revision of the territorial clauses of the peace treaties. But revision, urgent as the pressure of events may be, is itself a procedure of conciliation and consent and cannot be accomplished on 12 hours' notice."

There was no hint in the Times whether any "revision" would affect merely Czechoslovakia or might be extended to include Brit-

Dress Designer In Days Of Victoria Visits City

Tells of Royal Costumes and How Women Sat Up All Night So They Wouldn't Muss Up New Coiffures.

By FRANCES E. GENSLEY

Rolling the names of Queen Victoria, the Prince Consort and Gladstone off her tongue with the ease of complete familiarity, Mrs. Horace Thomas Newstead of London, England, talked entertainingly of the royal family of Great Britain yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. W. T. Jameson, 41 Blymyer avenue, where she was a guest.

Mrs. Newstead was a dress designer during the reign of Queen Victoria and prepared many young women and matrons for a court audience. She contrasted the costumes of the women at the turn of the century with those worn by those presented today.

Get Up Early for Court.

"At that time," she said, "there were not many hairdressers, and many women had their hair arranged the day before and then sat up the whole night so as not to muss their coiffures. Often they were in their carriages at 6 a. m. waiting their turn to be presented at court."

One of her most vivid recollections is of the gown she designed for Lady Sunderland which was made with an entire bodice of artificial heather draped with a ruby velvet cape descending into a nine-foot train trimmed with the same blossoms. With this outfit she carried a bouquet of real heather blooms.

Verifying a number of biographies of Queen Victoria, Mrs. Newstead corroborated the statement

COBB TO LEAVE EYSTON 'KING'

BONNEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah—(INS)—With the world's land speed record now standing at 357.50 miles per hour, the amazing duel for speed supremacy between Capt. E. T. Eyston and John Cobb, both of England, today was definitely ended for this year.

Cobb, a London fur broker, said he would pack up his 7,000-pound Railton racer and head for home instead of attempting another assault of Eyeston's new record.

News-Journal Party To Give Returns On School Bond Vote

A question of vital interest will be decided at a special election Tuesday—whether Mansfield shall institute a million-dollar school building program.

And Tuesday night, The News-Journal will stage an election party.

The now-familiar silver screen will be in place on Walnut street—The News-Journal's election machinery will be in readiness, and geared to flash returns on the screen as rapidly as they are received

In addition, special telephone operators will be on duty to handle telephone inquiries on the outcome of the election. Just call Canal 4251.

It'll be more fun, though, to come to the party and keep track of the returns as they come in.

Be at The News-Journal office by 7:15—the count should be fast, since officials in the voting booths will have only one contest to tabulate, and the count should be fast.

It will be over early—and then you can go home with the answer to the question—"Shall Mansfield have two new junior highs and modernize its present grade school buildings?"

POLICE 'TIGHTEN UP' ON PARKING

Bates Orders Officers to 'Bear Down' After Merchants Ask Stricter Enforcement.

A general "tightening up" on the city's parking regulations by the police department was ordered today by Police Chief Meade K. Bates.

The order came on the heels of a plea made to Mayor Claude M. Hunter yesterday by the Retail Merchants association for "more rigid" enforcement of the traffic code.

Bates said that police were to be informed to "bear down" on overtime parking.

He warned autoists that the order was no idle threat and was not to be construed as "just another traffic drive."

"The order is going into effect and will be carried out seven days a week," he said.

Bates explained that the department had only two men in the downtown district to check on parking but that when members of the department who are now on vacation return, he hoped to make a change that would add another officer to first shift duty.

He warned merchants and office workers that the city ordinance regulating parking would be enforced "to the letter." The chief pointed out the need for "at least" four more patrolmen to properly "do the job," but added he would do what he could with his present force.

Hobbyists To Get Chance To Show Off Collections

Hobby enthusiasts of Mansfield and nearby towns will be given an opportunity to show their collections during the week of Sept. 26 in a hobby display to be sponsored by the Retail Merchants association.

The display will be held in windows of various downtown stores for one week and will be divided into six classifications with a prize going to the winner of each classification and ribbons to other places.

Classifications are relics and curios; minatures and dolls; coins, medals, books and autographs; stamps and first day covers; woodworking and handicraft; miscellaneous, including model exhibit, match labels, buttons, sea shells, natural history and anything else not classified.

The hobby collections will be judged by a committee from the Marion Hobby club, Thursday, Sept. 29. Prizes will be awarded Sept. 30. Displays must be registered at the Retail Merchants association, 502 Farmers Bank building by Sept. 23. Window space in the various stores will be assigned following registrations.

BERLIN: Hitler Wants Early Reply on Demands for Sudetens

(By United Press)

BERLIN — Great Britain must not only accept Adolf Hitler's terms in the Czechoslovak minority crisis but must accept them soon it was reported today in political quarters.

Well informed sources said that the center of gravity, diplomatically had shifted to London and that Hitler planned no move before he heard from Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain.

But the situation in Czechoslovakia itself was such in German eyes that there might be an explosion at any moment.

The German official news agency asserted that 23,000 Sudeten Germans, in all, had fled the "terror" in Czechoslovakia and the number was increasing rapidly. Refuge camps were being established in Germany and in Austria.

It was reported that almost the entire leadership of the Sudeten German party, after fleeing Czechoslovakia to avoid arrest, had returned under cover to keep Sudetens organized.

In Berlin there was but one view: Hitler's terms, and the union of a substantial part of the Sudeten country to Germany, must be accepted.

It was said that if announcement were made that there was to be a second meeting between Hitler and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain, it would be taken as indication that Britain was substantially ready to meet the German viewpoint

Hence Hitler awaited the British cabinet decision.

PRAGUE: Henlein's Aid Tells Sudetens 'Don't Be Led Astray'

(By International News Service)

PRAGUE—Ernst Kundt, one of the chief lieutenants of Konrad Henlein, Sudeten Deutsche party leader, issued a proclamation today appealing to Sudeten Germans to await the outcome of the 'fateful conversations" between Chancellor Hitler and Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain on the explosive Czech crisis.

'Don't allow yourselves to be led astray by suspension of the Sudeten party," the proclamation said. "Whether parties are to remain in Czechoslovakia is no longer the decisive isue.

"What is decisive is the fate of Germanism and our homeland. Until a decision is taken, remain fair. Let your nerves be as steel. God is with us!"

Meanwhile, as defiant as if she were a major military power, Czechoslovakia fought to save her territorial integrity from the Sudeten annexation plans broached by Hitler.

The Czech press unanimously rejected the plebiscite proposal or any border revision suggestion. Newspapers warned that solution of the crisis could be reached only at Prague and not through a conference of the big powers.

Though Czechoslovakia's battle for continued existence in her present status remained in the diplomatic rather than military arena, but Vice Premier Rudolf Bechyen, in words that showed his country is prepared for more violent action, warned:

"In this state there will be no plebiscite, nor will there be any international police.

"A plebiscite is not even open to discussion. It would be the shortest way to war."

Dissolution of the Sudeten party was ordered by Prague in a final effort to stamp out the Nazi movement in the Sudetenland headed by "Fuehrer" Henlein, whom the government has charged with treason.

SATURDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1938.

Drive carefully tomorrow—this is too pleasant a season to land in hospital or morgue.

It would be pleasant to spend at Salt Flats speed, if the way back wasn't over such a rough road.

President Roosevelt's objection to "yes—but" senators was apparently not shared by thoughtful voters.

According to careful calculations by the Boston Globe: "People playing the numbers go against as great odds as would a tennis player with one leg, a sprained wrist, two cataracts and a coronary thrombosis."

It's Your Vote That Really Counts.

TWO closely associated articles appeared in yesterday's News-Journal.

One told of Mansfield's voting population reaching a new high—as a result of 2,125 registrations and transfers handled by the board of elections since the August primaries.

The other had to do with the outcome of a straw vote on the school bond issue, taken at John Simpson and Hedges Junior high schools.

The rush of voters to register or transfer can be interpreted only as evidence of widespread interest in next Tuesday's special election on the school bond issue.

When the school bond proposal was voted on in the August primaries the vote on this issue totaled 9,122—of which 5,546 were FOR and 3,576 AGAINST—a majority of slightly more than 60 per cent, but a few hundred votes short of the required 65 per cent.

Under half of the Mansfield men and women, now eligible to vote, cast ballots on the school bond issue at the previous election.

No more important community obligation rests upon EVERY VOTER WHO FAVORS THE SCHOOL BOND ISSUE THAN GOING TO THE POLLS NEXT TUESDAY AND MARKING A BALLOT "FOR" IT.

Not often, in the course of a lifetime, does a person find opportunity to project the benefits of a vote so far into the future as will be done by making it possible to carry through the public school improvement program which awaits the outcome of next Tuesday's election.

By a 93 per cent majority, pupils of Hedges and John Simpson Junior high schools have expressed approval of the bond issue—and it will not be long before these young people will be doing a part of the paying.

IF EVERY MANSFIELD MAN AND WOMAN WHO FAVORS THE SCHOOL BOND ISSUE WILL MAKE SURE TO VOTE NEXT TUESDAY IT WILL PASS—otherwise it may again fail, by even so little as a single vote—YOUR vote!

What Lies Ahead In Europe?

THE WORLD gasped, took a breath, and then applauded the gesture of Neville Chamberlain in going to Germany to offer to Hitler a plan for world peace. But not everyone who admired the courage and judgment which inspired the trip had much hope of what would come of it. There were those who thought it meant Czechoslovakia would simply become another Spain.

This school of thought took the attitude that the conference on Thursday simply meant that the great powers would find some way to save face while backing down. They would avoid a major war, leaving the Sudetens and the Czechoslovakian government to fight it out themselves, with long-drawn skirmishes leading at last to civil war.

That is a dark vision, not at all impossible of coming true. It leads to belief that the world catastrophe will not come tremendously and at once, but slowly and in spots. Here is China and Palestine. There is the Russo-Japanese border. Spain is becoming exhausted just as Czechoslovakia begins. There is always danger of trouble in India and South America.

Before this picture of the return to barbarism of the whole human race, the idea of one big major war involving clear-cut ideas of what the world wants, with victory, at length, inevitably in favor of democracy, becomes as a clean, sharp surgical operation compared with a lingering disease.

To Card Index Reckless Drivers.

A PLAN is being worked out in Toledo to card index careless and reckless motorists, so that the record may be available when the offender appears in traffic court.

Every city has at least a few habitually dangerous drivers, who indulge in excessive speed, ignore lights, pay no attention to boulevard stops, pass other cars at intersections, swing recklessly around corners, or in other ways violate rules of safe driving.

Such practices are not among the "rights" to which law-abiding citizens are entitled, and there is no reason why a motorist who jeopardizes the lives and property of other persons should not be card indexed for police records, and warned to change his driving habits.

Endless Chess Possible.

CHESS has been played for many hundred years, and yet there are new wrinkles found in it. Long as a chess game seems to onlookers who have never caught the bug, the half has not been known. Games, as far as the records go, all seem to have ended sometime, if the contestants kept at it and observed established rules. But now a Princeton professor is credited with a system whereby a game can be played forever, without having either a definite victory or a draw.

It is done by mathematics, as might be expected, inasmuch as the revelation was made by a mathematician at a convention of mathematicians.

With so many really worth-while things yet to be done in the world, the idea of carrying a game of chess on and on through successive generations of addicts has no special attraction for more than one person in a million—which may be regarded as fortunate.

Douglas Corrigan once took a prize in a baby show—indicating that even such a handicap can be overcome.

WASHINGTON — After a few days aboard a coast guard cutter we say that life at sea is all that it is cracked up to be, and more.

We are willing to concede that our knowledge is incomplete because we have never been to sea in a really upending gale, nor in winter when ice freezes over everything. Our experience is largely limited to a recent cruise aboard the 2,000 ton coast guard cutter Chelan out of Boston. We were a sort of supernumerary with nothing to do but ask questions about it all.

The coast guard prides itself on being the only one of the three major armed forces of the country which has a really active peace time duty. During prohibition days it had a "front" as well defined as a trench line. Rum runners stood out beyond the 12 mile limit waiting only for nightfall to slip a fast boat to shore.

Most of that ended with repeal but ships still blunder into rocks in fog. Schooners loaded with fish break propellers and have to be towed to safety. Fishermen mangled in winches must be speeded to hospitals ashore. Private yachts and small boats are forever getting lost. And during the spring months icebergs must be spotted to prevent tragedies such as the Titanic disaster.

* * *

Pretty Beat.

ON OUR first day out from Boston, the Chelan rescued a fishing boat with a broken shaft and rudder and put out a fire which already had gutted a 75-foot sail boat off the Massachusetts port of Scituate (call it situate). After that we dusted off and pat-rolled a two-day yacht race at Southport, Maine. Those things sound routine but in doing them the ship traveled up and down America's most historic and rugged shoreline—the New England coast.

Seamen fall in love with that coast, its rocky harshness and all, but we liked it best at night. Then its raw lines are hidden. Occasionally a long string of regularly spaced lights show where a "through" highway parallels the coast. Small boats, their side lights glowing, skim along just outside the shoals. Out to sea a freighter wallows along, northbound with coal from New York, or southbound with lumber, woodpulp or ore. From every jutting headland, lighthouses flash their warning codes.

All these things are seen from the ship's bridge where throughout the night an officer is on duty, checking the course almost mile by mile. A hospital quiet prevails on the bridge at night. No light burns except a dim one over the compass and the one occasionally flashed on the navigation chart while the course is checked. It is easier to see from a darkened bridge.

* * *

Cobra at Boston.

SOMETIMES the cutters run into fantastic jobs. A while back, a ship loaded with zoo animals which it had carried 6,000 miles from South Africa was turning into Boston harbor when it hit an uncharted submerged rock in a fog, 10 miles from home port.

Coast guard boats and other rescue vessels swarmed about, removing the animal cages. It was a nice clean rescue job until somebody discovered that a cobra had escaped on the stranded ship. That put the rescuers on edge until a reptile expert assured them that the cobra, a jungle snake, would be paralyzed or killed by the northern cold in 10 minutes.

Half the hull still dangles on the rock. The other half broke off and sank. But imagine finding an uncharted rock in Boston harbor, busy these 300 years.

In late years flying boats have speeded up rescue of sick or injured men at sea. In two or three hours a plane can drop down beside a vessel a whole day's sailing distance from shore.

* * *

We must tell you about Oscar. He is the dummy who is thrown overboard from the cutters to give the crew practice in life saving. In the water Oscar shows only from his chin up and is hard to see amid the frothy waves. But Oscar never has been lost.

Incidentally, we asked every sea-going man we met, and they all thought it was pretty silly for a captain to go down with his ship, just for the principle of the thing.

Poison In the Hines Case.

A single point about the Hines mistrial deserves particular notice. In defense of his ruling ending the trial of the Tammany district leader, Justice Pecora argued that the brief question of Prosecutor Dewey was so prejudicial, so like "one drop of poison" that might kill the individual, that an admonition to the jury to ignore it would not offset the damage. So, he held, the whole case had to be thrown out.

But if it was so bad as all that, if the one jury could not be led to ignore the few words of the prosecutor, how is it going to be possible for any jury selected to do it? The case will be tried again, of course. Justice Pecora stressed the necessity of that. But the prosecutor's few words now are public information. Every literate person in New York, as outside, knows about them. What, in fact, is gained by the mistrial?

Nothing is gained for justice, and much has been lost. It includes all the effort and expense that had gone into a trial of four weeks. But the greatest loss is the lowered public respect for the courts and the ways of justice. The real drop of poison will be found there.—Kansas City Times.

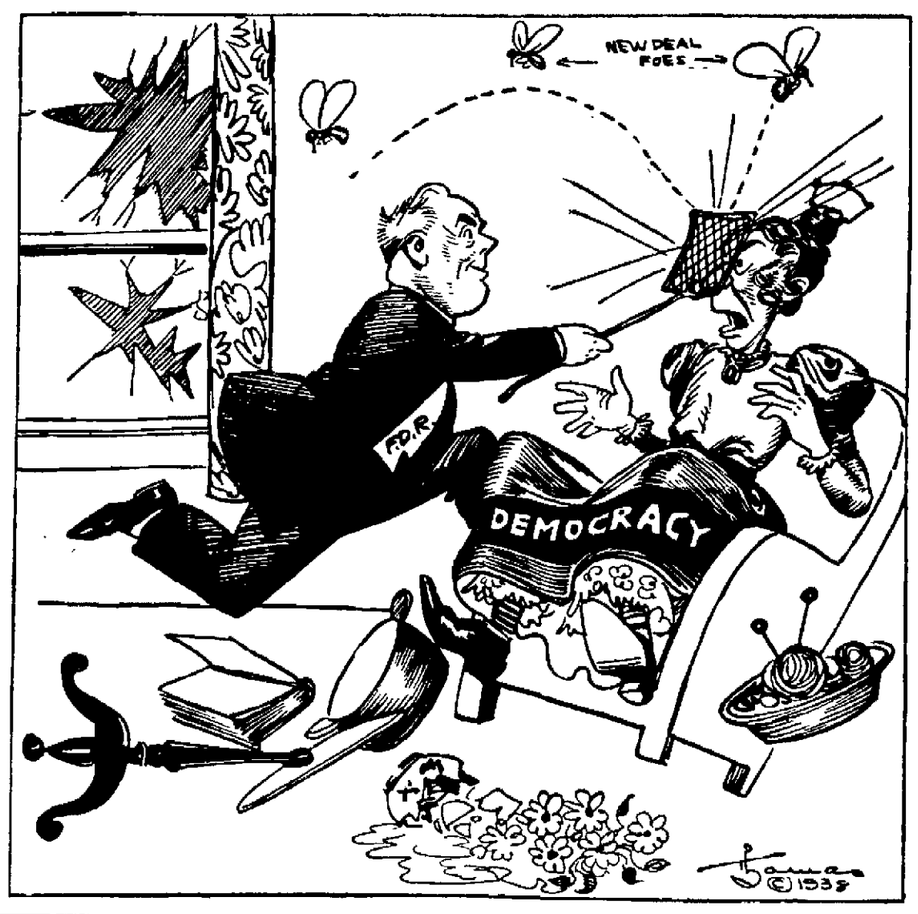
THE RECKLESS SWATTER



Crop Failures Cheer New Dealers

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Secretary Wallace's agricultural department reports indicate that unfavorable weather toward the summer's end had cut down this year's American farm production a trifle below earlier advance estimates. The odd feature of the situation is that practically all expert commentators on these reports express themselves in a tone of considerable satisfaction. They are not unqualifiedly satisfied, because the weather was not as bad as it might have been. Consequently our crop failures have been inadequate. Nevertheless they have been somewhat beneficial.

WALLACE

When I speak of this as an odd way of looking at the matter, I mean to say that it would have been so considered years ago, when I lived in the wheat, corn and hog belt. A poor growing season in that era rated as a public calamity. To be sure, farmers complained that prices were low when they had bumper yields, whereas they didn't have anything to sell when figures were high, due to dought, hail or grasshoppers. Still, I never heard it argued that big crops were a curse or that semi-famine was a blessing.

* * *

A NOVEL PLAN

The other day an acquaintance of mine suggested to me a novel plan for agriculture's benefit.

I mustn't identify him too closely. In the first place, he was sarcastic: he didn't mean what he said. Secondly, he was insulting to the New Deal's so-called "philosophy of scarcity." To quote him inevitably would involve him in trouble with his superiors.

Anyway, he's a bug specialist—an entomolgist in the agriculture department.

This chap's proposition is that we ought to encourage pestiferous insects—to make the most of the ones we have already, and to import new kinds, even as the Japanese beetle is a compartively recent immigrant.

It's a fantastic notion, certainly.

All the same, about half a decade past, the idea was boosted in Dixie that a monument ought to be erected in the southland to the boll weevil, as a restraint upon cotton overproduction.

Need I remark that that was a josh also?

Still, as my entomological friend observes, bugs are a lot more effective than any amount of unplantings and plowings-under, and it's hard to slaughter little pigs as fast as hog cholera kills them automatically.

Moreover, bugs and germs are impartial.

This isn't true of un-plantings and plowings-under.

A land-owner can un-plant his own land or plow it under and be indemnified for doing so. A tenant farmer, however, has no land of his own, not to plant on or to plow under. He can't very well rent land not to plant on, or to plant on and then plow under.

It sounds mixey, but it's equally sound ecnomically.

* * *

HAD SHOT AT IT

Besides, I think a lot of our farmers are slightly cuckoo.

I'm not much of a farmer but I ran a farm once—in South America.

I had a cow, which gave all the milk I needed. I had pigs, and ate one occasionally. I had chickens which laid eggs for me, and, beheaded now and then, were good eating. I raised my own vegetables. In short, I set my own table. If necessary I burned corn for fuel. I wore no clothes to speak of.

I didn't need much cash money except for my primitive wants—like tobacco and alcohol. If I'd been enterprising probably I could have supplied these too.

But a North American farmer plants nothing but wheat or corn or cotton and tobacco.

He's dependent on condensed milk, canned fruit and vegetables, meat from a butcher shop and miscellany from a grocery. He can't eat raw wheat or cotton.

He isn't a farmer. He's a manufacturer of basic stuff.

It isn't an agricultural problem.

Listen, World!

Learn to Take a Half Loaf.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THE most tragic failures in life aren't those who've deliberately done wrong—

All too often, they are the stubborn, serious folk who insist on doing everything Just Right!

THE PEOPLE WHO REFUSE TO TAKE A HALF LOAD WHEN THEY'VE SET* THEIR HEART UPON A WHOLE ONE!

Plain bit of truth, isn't it? But it takes most of us many a weary year to learn it. Myself, for example.

Always I've wanted to be a great writer. Not a famous writer—or a popular one. (Fame, cash and popularity rarely matter a hoot to your real lover of words.) But a truly great writer, with the knowledge and time to polish each phrase of its exquisite best . . . to waste hours, if need be, searching for the one, perfect expression.

To work like that, giving all I had to it, pouring out my heart in an ecstacy of service to words . . . life, it seemed, could hold no greater joy. And some day—at some far off time when I've met all my obligations — why then, perhaps, I'd have a chance to write just as I longed to do. Not hurried . . . not worried . . . not tugged or pushed by this or that pressure or demand . . . just selfishly, joyously doing the one thing for which my soul ached—doing it perfectly.

But, of course, I couldn't do it just yet. For Jenny was sick—and weary Ruth needed a vacation—and poor Pete was in trouble again. And there were all those debts. No, I couldn't write as I wished to—just yet. I'd have to put it off, take something for the present that paid well and quick. But some day—

So, day by day, I put my dream off. And—you might as well know—I didn't feel any too sweet about it. It seemed such a shame . . . not to be able to do the one thing you maybe were meant to do. To do it perfectly . . . not dashing it off in a frantic jam, trying to meet a deadline. Not having to stop and answer scores of troubled people you'd never met, giving up your own dreams to comfort their hurt, which, chances were, were largely their own fault.

Oh, WHY couldn't I, just for once, have things My way!

And so the weeks and the years went on, rushing, racing, hurrying, worrying years that some envied but that were poisoned for me by that undercurrent of bitter regret and passionate hunger. So that even when I wrote a line or two that I almost liked . . . or did some act which would otherwise have given me joy . . . that inner hurt spoiled everything.

Then, gradually, the truth began to dawn on me. Here I was, going through life, going through rich, vital, proud years of life, filled with glorious opportunity; and yet I was spoiling it all by that foolish dream of Perfect Writing. But did I have any proof that I could do Perfect Writing . . . or that anyone would be the better for it if I could?

What a spoiled baby I was! Crying for a useless shiny moon which I could neither eat nor hock, and letting the warm, sweet reality of everyday go unregarded! Why didn't I grow up in my imagination as well as my big, husky body?

IF I COULDN'T HAVE WHAT I LIKED . . . WHY DIDN'T I LIKE WHAT I COULD HAVE?

So now I do!

There are gray hairs, now, where once there was a dreamer's foolish, fuzzy gold. And I know, now, that I'll never write the world's great story or song—

BUT WHO CARES! I HAVE MY FEET ON THE EARTH AT LAST . . . THE SIMPLE, GENEROUS EARTH . . . AND THAT'S WORTH TEN TONS OF STARS YOU'LL NEVER REACH!

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

A merry heart doeth good like a medicine: but a broken spirit drieth the bones.—Prov. 17:22.

What's Happened?

Week-End Summary of Current Events.

LAST WEEK Czechoslovakia's Sudeten Germans were demanding: "Autonomy and justice." Over the week-end they changed their chant to: "We want a plebiscite." This week their slogan was: "One people, one fuehrer, one reich." And they backed it up with guns.

For Adolf Hitler, in his long-awaited announcement of the German attitude toward the Sudetens' quarrel with the Czech government, had told the world: "I assure the democracies that the fate of the Sudetens is not a matter of indifference to us. If these harassed people feel they are without rights and aid, they will get both from us."

What kind of aid?

Hitler called the Czech president a liar, pictured democracy as a stooge of bolshevism and boasted of Germany's new forts. But he stopped short of threatening military intervention in the Czech-Sudeten argument. Europe felt that meant he wasn't ready for war—yet.

Nations In Arms.

Czechoslovakia's friends, and their friends, did everything possible to prove they were ready:

France held an estimated 2,000,000 men, 2,000 fighting planes and 200 warships on their marks; moved civilians from the German border areas, where a reported 400,000 troops stood at war stations in the underground forts of the Maginot line; completed plans for general mobilization; banned exports of cotton and iron.

Britain kept in touch with France over an open telephone line between No. 10 Downing street and the Paris war office; sent the home fleet, carrying regulars and reserves, into the North Sea; reviewed military and industrial preparedness measures; received gestures of aid from the dominions; warned Germany again not to count on British neutrality if war got started.

Prague's Position.

Only Czechoslovakia continued to regard the Sudetens as a domestic problem. "If imperialist powers were to enter into relations between the nationalities," President Eduard Benes said, in a radio speech, "a regrettable shadow would be thrown over the future co-operation among them. I believe the German people, as well as the Czechs, Slovaks and all others, truly desire to work together in quiet."

Prague had the problem strictly one for settlement by negotiations between (1) Premier Milan Hodza and a committee of his cabinet ministers and (2) a committee representing Konrad Henlein, the Sudeten leader.

British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain flew to Germany Thursday for a conference with Hitler; flew back to London Friday to report to the British cabinet and expected to return to Germany for a later meeting with the Fuehrer, in hope of arriving at peaceful settlement agreement of the Czech controversy.

Politics

"Purges" Flop.

Political interest this week centered in Maryland and Georgia Democratic primaries, where President Roosevelt's attempted purge of senators who opposed some phases of his New Deal was given a severe beating.

Dapper, lantern-jawed Sen. Millard E. Tydings, 48, was on Roosevelt's black-list as one of "those who have betrayed the New Deal." To unseat him, in Maryland's Democratic primary last Monday, the president backed tiny, silver-haired Rep. David J. Lewis, 69.

Tydings won easily and anti-New Dealers cheered his victory as repudiation of attempted presidential "dictation in state affairs. Also brought thought of a Tydingsfor-President movement.

Down in Georgia scholarly Walter Franklin George, 60, sought renomination for his fourth term against Lawrence Camp, 39-year-old federal attorney, and ex-Gov. Eugene Talmadge. Mr. Roosevelt had criticized George as being out of touch with the "broad objectives" of the Democratic party and said he hoped Camp would be the next senator from Georgia.

Camp ran a poor third while George was well out in front over Talmadge when the count ended.

Next Week.

This week's voting cleaned up slate-making for November in all but six states. Next week the spotlight turns to New York where the president is backing James H. Fay in Tuesday's Democratic primary to unseat Rep. John O'Connor, chairman of the house rules committee.

* * *

Poll Taxes and Pensions.

Eight states require voters to pay poll taxes, but six of them exempt old folks. Poll tax opponents say this results in an undue proportion of old folks among voters. And old-age pension schemes have been campaign issues in several states this year.

President Roosevelt, last weekend: (1) Threw his influence behind poll tax repeal; (2) dodged questions on the report that he would not object to increasing old-age pensions if new taxes were levied to finance the boost.

* * *

Relief Issue.

"Relief is a good issue and should be debated," says WPA Chief Harry Hopkins.

Mrs. Sarah Oliver Hulswit, leader of a Suffern, N. Y., "Women's Rebellion," is willing. She says relief recipients are being "coerced" and should not be allowed to vote.

Economics

Trade Trend.

Business, although still feebler than last year, continued to improve during August, and if this trend continues, the 1938 national income will be nearly $64,000,000,000, according to the U. S. commerce department. Last year the national income was $69,380,000,000, but that's the only year since 1930 in which it has exceeded $64,000,000,000.

Recovery's fair-haired boy is residential building. It lagged far behind general industrial activity during the early stages of the 1935-36 upswing, but last March it started climbing while other lines of business were still sliding down hill. Now the gap is almost closed.

* * *

War and Wall St.

AP inquirers found the consensus of Wall Street and government opinion to be: (1) America's financial system is better prepared to withstand the shock of a general European war now than it was in 1914. (2) The immediate setback to business and agriculture in event of such a war probably would be less severe than in 1914. (3) Profits on the 1916-18 scale would be less likely because of greater preparations for war, the neutrality laws, the depreciated credit status of major European nations, and the ban on loans to nations which have defaulted on previous obligations.

Little Business Men.

The National Small Business Men's association was founded by Dewitt Emery, president of an Akron letterhead company, to preserve "free enterprise and all that goes with it." At its first convention, in Pittsburgh this week, 200 some delegates were warned by Dr. Alfred P. Haake, Chicago economist, that America is "on the brink of dictatorship" and adopted a resolution saying "Americans do not want war."

At Home

Poultry and Policy.

New York's poultry racket was a market district shakedown system that was exposed four years ago. The policy racket was a gambling business.

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey attempted to prove in a spectacular trial this fall that Tammany District Leader James J. Hines had served as a political "fixer" for the policy racket.

In cross-examining a former assistant district attorney, Dewey asked the witness if he remembered testimony before a special grand jury "about Hines and the poultry racket."

That "verbal drop of poison," Justice Ferdinand E. Pecora felt, was "very serious and prejudicial error" against the defendant. So the sensational proceedings ended this week in a mistrial. And Dewey said he would move for a new trial at the earliest possible date.

* * *

Judges Prefer Blond.

For "Miss America 1938," judges at the Atlantic City beauty pageant last week-end picked blond Marilyn Meseke, 20, of Marion, O. Dimensions: Height, 5 feet 7 inches; weight, 128 pounds; neck, 12⅝ inches; bust, 34¾; waist, 26; hips, 36¼; thigh, 21; calf, 12; ankle, 8; upper arm, 9½; lower arm, 8¼.

* * *

School Days.

A fourth of the people in the U. S. will be going to school by the end of this month, the federal education office estimated this week—22,400,000 in elementary schools, 6,750,000 in high schools, 1,350,000 in colleges.

* * *

Political Party.

Impatient for the free eats promised at a G. O. P. rally in Pittsburgh last week-end, 55,000 people raided the dining hall and made a greasy mess of three roast oxen, 50,000 buns and 60,000 roastin' ears.

* * *

Corn Prospects.

The government will have to offer corn loans to farmers this fall if (1) the new crop exceeds normal domestic and exports needs or (2) the price on Nov. 15 is under about 63 cents a bushel. Federal farm experts reported last week-end that August heat and insect damage had cut corn prospects to less than estimated needs, but a large carryover from last year kept the price below 63 cents.

* * *

Successful Operation.

White House correspondents took a recess from political reporting this week to cover a medical story—an ulcer operation, performed at Rochester, Minn., on the president's secretary and "little son, Jimmy." They reported it an "apparent success" and, with the president, headed back for the political front.

Last night the 23 guests were entertained with parlor games. The wedding date was revealed as Oct. 1 by a Skye terrier who came into the room and went to each guest showing a card attached to a red ribbon tied about his neck.

A buffet luncheon was served by the hostess.

Mr. Witman, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Witman, Grand Rapids, Mich., is employed here at the Sun Glow corporation.

For the affair there were 8 guests present, and they made a bride's book for the honoree. A two-course luncheon was served at a long table centered with coral and white tapers in crystal candelabra and a bowl of varigated asters. The hostesses presented an electrical gift to Mrs. Hall.

The new welfare chairman is in charge of five divisions including child welfare, community service, division of correction, division of health and division of problems in industry.

A sub-chairman serves in each of these groups, and Mrs. Middleton serves to co-ordinate their activities.

"It is our purpose," Mrs. Middleton, who will serve for a period of three years, stated, "to make a survey of the work being done in the welfare department so that we may revise, co-ordinate, and eliminate duplication of work in so far as possible.

Mrs. Middleton is a member of the Mansfield Sorosis, the Sappho club, and the Civic club, which was organized last year to do welfare work in the city. Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I am sure the others in the farmhouse living room were as relieved as I when Philip Veritzen finally framed a request to which we could give an affirmative answer.

Lillian had successfully jockeyed us through the difficult task of thwarting the famous man's demands; first, that he be permitted to see Queen Olga, and second, that he send in the best physician available to attend her in the attack of nervous exhaustion, the seriousness of which Katherine had purposely exaggerated at Queen Olga's own wish, because, for some secret reason of her own, she did not wish to see the admirer of her youth until she should be stronger.

But we had decided that there was no objection to his seeing the Princes Olina, and Katherine promptly answered his query "When can I see her?"—we all knew that his use of the auxiliary verb was intentional — with a courteous, almost cordial affirmative.

"There is no reason why you cannot see her immediately," she said. "I will go up at once and send her down."

Philip Veritzen shivered perceptibly.

"Please!" he said with a distinctly imperative note in his voice. "Will you say to the princess that I desire an audience."

I wondered if the rest were having as hard a time controlling their amusement at his ridiculous, stilted attitude as I was. I did not dare to look at Dicky for fear I should see something in his eyes which would make it impossible for me to hold my risibles in check.

Katherine Leaves.

Katherine's voice was imperturbable as she answered him.

"I will tell her what you have said," she enunciated slowly, and turned again to the door.

"Thank you," he returned with meticulous courtesy, and while his eyes were on Katherine, I saw Lillian send a signal to her husband. I did not know what it meant until after he touched Dicky's arm and both men crossed to Philip Veritzen's side, and engaged him in animated colloquy. With her old friend's attention safely withdrawn from us, Lillian spoke in an almost inaudible murmur to me.

"Look here!" she said. "Phil's going to make a play to get Olina away from here, or to have Noel stay here on the pleas of having to complete that operetta. Why don't we spike his guns by proposing that Noel come to the farmhouse, but that once he's here he must stay here and be incommunicado? No messages or running back and forth to papa."

I looked at her in astonishment. Why was she apparently playing directly into Philip Veritzen's hand in this proposal to throw Noel and Olina together?

The amused smile with which she answered my look told me that she would have laughed aloud if she had not been afraid of attracting her old friend's now absorbed attention in what Harry and Dicky were saying.

"Keep the lingerie intact!" she adjured me. "I'm not plotting to throw Noel into Olina's arms, and cause him to forget Mary, if only temporarily. But I am planning a nice double cross for Eclipe. If Noel can't be reached by telephone or messenger while he's here what's to prevent your sneaking him up to the city to see Mary? Careful! Guard your face!"

I needed the injunction, for she had so surprised and delighted me that I had almost given a delighted ejaculation. But I smothered it just in time, and a furtive glance at my former employer told me that Dicky and Harry, with admirable and experienced teamwork, were keeping him so engaged that he had no chance to look our way, even if he were inclined to be inquisitive over our conversational duet.

"It's perfect!" I murmured, "and I'll do my part."

"I'll back you up," she shot back, and had time for nothing more, for Olina was coming into the room.

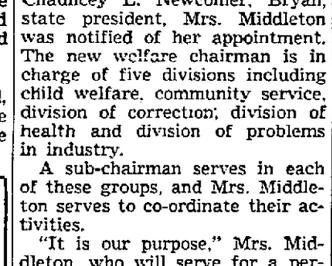
GRANTING SURE LOSERS

In many a hand you have several sure losing tricks in one suit and possible losers in another. The latter may depend upon which side does the leading. If that is the case, it is sometimes best to clear out the remaining side suit by ruffing, then lead your sure losers to the defenders until they finally come to you with the suit you hope they will lead.



(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable.)

At all tables in a duplicate this deal was played by South at 4-Spades and the heart K led.

Where the contract was defeated the declarers won the first trick with the heart A, then drew two rounds of spades and tried a club finesse. As both the Q and J of the suit were missing, it was a long shot to expect to pick up an extra trick with that suit.

The players who made the contract realized that once they lost control they would lose three diamond tricks. In order to limit the losses to that suit, they won the lead of the heart K with the A and immediately ruffed a heart. Then two rounds of trumps were taken and another heart ruffed. The defenders were then put in with a diamond. After three tricks were won in that suit, East had to lead a club. The Q forced the K and the 10 was finessed on the next round.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, Sept. 18.

Sunday's horoscope holds happy presage for all things of a social, romantic, intellectual or cultural character, with much excitement and enjoyment in such direction. However, there are also omens of setbacks, impediments or sorrows that will take much decision, wisdom and assistance of good friends to mitigate.

If This Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year in which there is much romantic, social or domestic activity, with friends and possibly courtship or marriage absorbing the interest to the neglect of more sordid matters. However, there may be some upset plans, delays, illness or regrettable circumstances in which good friends or influential persons may be depended upon to intervene.

Madison Displays Power As It Topples Sunbury

Bellville Wallops Centerburg, 31 to 6

Balliett Scores Four Times As Hodgemen Open Season In Impressive Fashion.

By CHUCK MARTIN

BELLVILLE HIGH'S 1938 grid edition may not win the Mid-State league championship, but the sparkling performance it turned out in its debut yesterday marked is as a serious title contender.

Coach Royd Hodge's snappy aggregation broke loose with a brilliant display of power at Bellville to crush a scrappy Centerburg eleven, 31 to 6, before a good-sized crowd.

Winners Never Pressed.

Led by Beryl Balliett who crossed into pay dirt four times, Bellville jumped into a commanding lead in the first stanza, and was never pressed.

Centerburg's only serious threat came midway in the final stanza when Gantt intercepted a Bellville pass on the winners' 40 and galloped over without a hand touching him. It was the only time that the invaders penetrated Bellville's 25.

Bellville started things off with a bang with three markers in the opening period before Centerburg was able to settle down. Balliett played the important role in this frame as he tallied all the points.

The winners added another in the third chapter with Balliett again carrying the mail on an off tackle slash from the visitors' 17. And then Hamilton put the finishing touches on the victory by streaking around end for the final score. Bellville staged another determined drive in the fading seconds and worked the ball to the two as the gun ended the game.

Centerburg was unable to go any place through Bellville's sturdy line, but its Gantt-to-Kindred passing combination caused Hodges some worry before the game ended. On several occasions, the losers worked the ball into Bellville territory only to lose it on fumbles.

Substitutes Freely.

Bellville had its running game working smoothly and clicked off yardage with regularity. Hodges substituted freely, which probably accounted for the scoreless second period. The winners registered 15 first first downs to Centerburg's six.

Sherman, Cordle, Gantt and Kindred were outstanding for the invaders while Sheriff, Hamilton, Balliett and Martin played stellar roles for Bellville.

Ashland Topples Loudonville, 20-7.

ASHLAND — Ashland high school gridsters opened their season with an impressive 20 to 7 victory over the Loudonville Red Birds here yesterday.

Burns figured prominently in all of the scoring, going over tackle for the first touchdown in the opening quarter and throwing to Mumaw for the other scores, one in the first and the other in the third. Burns also kicked both points from placement.

Loudonville's touchdown came in the fourth period after three penalties gave it the ball on Ashland's one. Glover, sub-quarter, took it over, and Seigfried added the point.

Ashland registered 16 first downs to five for the visitors, and gained 334 yards to Loudonville's 64.

GALION — Coach John Burnison's Galion high Orangemen walloped Mt. Gilead, 25 to 7, in the opening game of the season for both teams under the lights here last night. All of the scoring was confined to the first half.

After a Burson-to-England pass gave the Indians a score at the start of the game, Galion added three in hurried order. In the first quarter, Schreck scored from the 35, Durtschi tallied from the 30 and added another from the 35. Freddies Lose Opener to Reserves.

FREDERICKTOWN — The Mt. Vernon Reserves went on a scoring spree in the final period here yesterday to humble a fighting Fredericktown high eleven, 30 to 6.

Fredericktown battled the Reserves on even terms for three chapters, but wilted under a hard charging attack in the final stanza when the invaders scored three times. Bill Weiss, lanky end, gave Mt. Vernon a 12 to 0 lead in the opening stanza by snagging two long passes in the end zone. But Fredericktown, sparked by Gregg, came back in the second period with a touchdown to cut the visitors lead to a 12 to 6 count. Gregg tallied the marker on a brilliant 27 yard dash.

Weiss also scored another touchdown in the final period and Falter added the other two on short plunges.

Mt. Vernon Whips Dayton Kizer, 6-0.

MT. VERNON — Mt Vernon high's North Central Ohio league representatives made their 1938 debut here last night by edging Dayton Kiser, 6 to 0.

The Yellow Jackets' lone touchdown thrust came in the opening chapter when "Red" Nugget plunged over from the two. Mt. Vernon lost several other scoring opportunities on fumbles.

Dayton's only serious threat was in the third quarter when a series of passes gave it a first down on Mt. Vernon's nine. The Jackets' line stiffened and Dayton was driven back to the 25 where the winners took the ball on downs.

The Jackets outplayed Dayton, registering 11 first downs to the invaders' five.

Millersburg Tops Danville, 13 to 0.

DANVILLE — Capt. Klose ploughed through for touchdowns in the opening first and fourth periods here today to enable Millersburg to defeat Danville High, 13 to 0. He also added the extra point from placement.

Millersburg, which chalked up eight first downs to three for Danville, held the upper hand during most of the battle as it kept the losers in their own territory. Not once did Danville threaten Millersburg's goal. Both scores were tallied on line plunges.

Harmon, Miller and Wilkins Lead Touchdown Parade In 60 to 12 Triumph.

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor.

THERE is one thing that can be said definitely about the current Madison high school gridiron warriors.

Coach Al Fendrick's 1938 Rams may lose a game or two, but it is going to take a tough team to trip them if their performance in their debut is a criterion.

Touchdown Parade.

The defending Mid-State league champions produced plenty of power last night as they opened their campaign in an auspicious fashion with a 60 to 12 victory over Sunbury under the Madison incandescents.

Few Madison teams were more spectacular in an inaugural than the Rams last night, but Mentor Fendrick had no comment to make after the game, although the Rams' followers went wild with enthusiasm.

There were about 1,000 witnesses at last night's slaughter, and the exhibition the Rams staged for their benefit stimulated hopes for another Mid-State league gonfalon.

The touchdown parade was led by Capt. Joe Miller, Gene Harmon and Bill Wilkins, with other Rams contributing their share to make the night an eventful one.

Harmon's ball carrying was a particular feature of the one-sided fray. He reeled off so many long runs that the spectators lost count of them. Four times he crossed into pay territory.

Wilkins lugged the pigskin into the touchdown area thrice, and the Rams' leader scored a couple of times, in addition to adding four extra points. To keep the records up to date, Bill Heichel accounted for the other two points.

Statistics of the game are unimportant. It was Madison from start to finish, except for the periods when Fendrick ran in his army of substitutes.

Fendrick employed 40 players, nearly four complete teams, in the rout which carries over Madison's undefeated streak of last season.

Harmon set the stage for the first score early in the initial period when he got loose for a 56-yard gain on a sweep. A penalty stopped the Rams momentarily, but Miller ended the drive on a buck from the three.

The cheering for the first touchdown had hardly quieted down before Harmon again crossed the goal line on a long run which originated on his own 44.

Madison held a 13 to 0 lead going into the second period in which Harmon added two more touchdowns, the shifty halfback going 40 yards for the first. The half ended with Madison in front 26 to 0.

Sunbury, coached by Everett Whipkey, formerly of Bellville, never threatened seriously in the first half, but came to life after the intermission when Owen intercepted a pass on his 35 and raced down the sideline 65 yards for a touchdown.

Harmon and Miller each added touchdowns for Madison in the third frame to enable the Rams to hold a 39 to 6 advantage at the end of the third frame.

Adds Three More.

In the fourth chapter, End Bill Wilkins scored three more touchdowns quicker than one can say "Jack Robinson." He went over on all three on the end of passes.

Outweighed Sunbury never dug very deep into Madison territory until late in the final quarter after Fendrick had inserted substitutes. Then Steemens bucked over the goal line after a long pass had placed the ball in scoring territory.

New London Bows To Lorain Reserves.

NEW LONDON, which meets the Madison Rams at Madison next Friday night, lost its inaugural at New London yesterday when it bowed to the Lorain Reserves, 15 to 6.

The New London outfit held the upper hand during the opening half, but was unable to hold the heavier invaders after the intermission. New London went into a 6 to 0 lead in the second stanza when Thomas returned a punt 35 yards for his club's only score.

Lorain started working in the third with a touchdown and safety to take an 8 to 6 advantage. The visitors pushed over another marker in the fourth and added the extra point. Lorain marked up 12 first downs while New London tallied three.

BIRDS WIN FIRST

PORTSMOUTH — (UP) — The Portsmouth Red Birds returned to their home grounds for the first time in more than a week today, confident they had jumped back on the victory trail after trouncing Akron, 7 to 1, for their first win in the championship Mid-Atlantic league playoff.

Moorhead, Zediker Engage Black, Burns In Special Match at Westbrook Sunday

A FOUR-BALL golf match featuring four of the outstanding younger stars of the city will be staged at the Westbrook Country club Sunday. The match will pit Bobby Moorhead, Westbrook champion, and Gene Zediker, against Bill Black, jr., and Johnny Burns.

The match will be played over the 36-hole route, and the winners will be decided on a low ball, high ball basis. The match is scheduled to get under way at 9 a. m., with the second half billed at 1:30 p. m.

Golf equipment will be given as prizes in the match which is being conducted by the Westbrook tournament committee, consisting of Lyden Beam, T. R. Sammons and A. J. Reynolds, to encourage competitive play by younger members of the club.

All of the players to engage in the match have been prominent in recent tournaments at the club.

In the elimination won by Moorhead this year, Black, Zediker and Burns were listed among the favorites. Burns, an Ohio Wesleyan student, won the second flight title after his elimination in the championship bracket.

Black is a member of the University of Michigan golf team, and Zediker, who has come along fast in competition, shot a hole-in-one in the Westbrook tournament this year.

The match is expected to attract a gallery even larger than that which saw Moorhead defeat Paul Auxter in the Westbrook finals two weeks ago.

Tigers Tough Again!

By OSCAR RUHL, News-Journal Sports Editor.

LOOK OUT for those Tigers again this year. Massillon, which comes to the city Saturday to engage our Tygers, again showed class as it whipped McKeesport, Pa., 19 to 7, last night. Coaches Russ Murphy and Harry Mehock saw the game . . . and saw plenty.

* * *

Sandusky, another future Mansfield foe, also came through victorious in its opening game, defeating Cleveland Collinwood by the the same score with which Massillon won.

* * *

Columbus East was the only future Mansfield opponent to lose its opener. East bowed to Middletown, 33 to 0, while Shelby and Ashland, also on the Tygers' schedule, whipped Norwalk, 18 to 0, and Loudonville, 20 to 7, respectively.

* * *

Over in the east, Dartmouth, Fordham, Cornell, Villanova and Holy Cross are being touted as Pittsburgh's chief rivals for sectional honors.

* * *

Averill

Rogers Hornsby looks to be the best bet to succeed Donie Bush as manager of the Minneapolis Millers.

* * *

Indian fans think quite a lot of Earl Averill as a centerfielder, but he did not give Joe DiMaggio any trouble in the popularity poll conducted by a cereal company. The Yank polled 61 per cent of the votes to Averill's 12.

* * *

Note to Francis Schmidt: Twenty-six lettermen —two for each position on the team except left tackle and right guard—are eligible for warfare at Southern California.

* * *

Tom Meany, New York newspaperman, reports that the "Cleveland catchers caught baseballs dropped from a height of 708 feet or approximately the same distance between the Indians and first place.

* * *

OF course, with a son on the team, E. S. Willard cannot be blamed for being enthusiastic over the coming John Carroll season, but there are plenty in Cleveland who agree with him. Prospects are bright at Carroll, with Ed looking like one of the best end bets.

* * *

Oscar Vitt is trying to talk Jimmy Dykes out of Gerald Walker, but the White Sox pilot says there isn't "a chance of Cleveland or anybody else getting him."

Foresters, Schoolmasters Tie for Club League Title

Climaxing 10 long years of effort, the Catholic Foresters finally nailed a share of the Y. M. C. A. Club softball league championship by beating down the Schoolmasters, 7 to 6, in a seven inning game at Liberty park to tie their foe for the honors.

The Foresters appeared as a beaten ball club going into the last half of the seventh, but rallied to send four runs across the plate to win. Miner's single sent over the winning run.

Kibler's triple and single did a lot of damage for the Schoolmasters. Davis and Rex also contributed two hits. Malaska and Lang led the Foresters' attack.

Vitt's Tribe Again Slumps

Defeat Sends Indians Two Games Behind Sox.

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—A late-season batting slump today rapidly diminished the chances of the Cleveland Indians to overtake the Boston Red Sox and end up the American league season in second place.

The Tribe has lost the last three out of four games and during that time its hitters have connected for only 24 safeties and scored only seven runs. It took superlative pitching by Mel Harder Thursday to pull out a 3 to 2 victory over Boston.

Latest hurling victim of the Indian batting slump was Denny Galehouse. He gave the Red Sox only four hits Friday, good for two runs, and lost 2 to 1. His mates punched seven safe blows off Archie McKain but had seven runners stranded on base through failure to hit safely "in the clutch."

The defeat stretched Boston's margin over the Tribe to two full games with the final contest in the four-game series scheduled for today. Johnny Humphries was expected to pitch for the Vittmen and Jack Wilson for Boston.

Turnesa Good Bet in Finals

OAKMONT, Pa. —(ANS)— The battle of the bunkered horses, otherwise the National Amateur Golf championship, staggered to its weary, whacky conclusion today—

The principals, Pat Abbott, 25-year-old part time actor from Altedena, Calif., and Willie Turnesa, 23-year-old fledgling of the seven golfing Turnesas; the distance, 36 holes; the probable result, Turnesa by a close score; expected gallery, 4,000, with most of these onlookers wondering where the golfers are.

Abbott and Turnesa yesterday finally emerged as the most able excavators in the 36-hold semi-finals. Abbott, with the aid of a truly red hot putting blade, scrambled to a 5 and 4 victory over Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn. Turnesa, quite steady in his all around play, out-golfed Edwin Kingsley, the Magna, Utah, oresampler, 4 and 3.

Redlegs Lose Chance to Step Up Notch

Splits as Pirates Also Divide Twin-Bill.

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— The tenth man on the Pittsburgh Pirates' team these days in their drive for the National league flat is Father Time. Every day that passes brings the Pirates nearer the pennant. They may be backing into it as some of the boys broadly assert, but they're getting there just the same.

The Pirates aren't exactly a ball of fire, but every time someone knocks them down they get right back up. And every time they get up Father Time chalks up a point for them because they are that much nearer the Oct. 2 finish line.

Bucs Blow Lead.

Golden opportunity to deal a knockout blow to the other contenders was passed up by the Pirates yesterday when they split a doubleheader with the Boston Bees. After winning the first game, 7-6, when Johnny Rizzo hit his 20th homer in the eleventh, the Pirates blew the second game in the ninth. After the Pirates had scored two runs in the ninth inning of the nightcap to break a 2-2 tie, the Bees came back with three runs in their half. Johnny Cooney's single drove in the tying and winning runs.

The split left the Pirates with a 3-game lead over the Cubs, each with 18 games remaining on the schedule. Idle yesterday, the Cubs play a doubleheader against the Giants at the Polo grounds today.

Cincinnati missed a chance to pick up ground by dividing with the Phillies. Paul Derringer became the first National league pitcher to win 20 games as the Reds won the opener, 2-0. Ernie Lombardi's 17th homer and Wally Berger's triple followed by an infield out gave the Reds their runs. Hugh Mulcahy won his fourth straight in stopping the Reds on three hits in the nightcap, 2-1.

The St. Louis Cardinals beat Brooklyn twice, 4-1, and 8-4, to increase their sixth place lead over the Dodgers to four games.

Nears League Title.

The New York Yankees need only two games to clinch the American league pennant after their 6-4 victory over Detroit. Lefty Gomez, although allowing 11 hits, won his 17th game. Frankie Crosseti drove in three Yank runs with a single and double.

The Boston Red Sox increased their second place margin over Cleveland to two games by defeating the Indians, 2-1. No other games were played.

Shelby Takes Opener

Whippets Impress Followers With 18 to 0 Victory Over Norwalk.

NORWALK — A Shelby high school football team which promises to be a factor in the N. C. O. conference race this season was on view here last night.

Coach Bill Query's Whippets displayed nice all-around form as they toppled Norwalk, 18 to 0, in the opening game for both teams and might have scored many more touchdowns had it been necessary.

Norwalk, on the other hand, fumbled frequently, and never threatened seriously. Shelby registered 12 first downs to five for the losers.

The Whippets scored one touchdown in each of the first three periods. The first score came in the opening period after Payne recovered a fumble on Norwalk's 13. Baker scored from the two. Miller's pass for the extra point was knocked down.

After driving to the 15 in the second quarter, Miller passed to Terman, who, in turn, lateralled to Yosick. Yosick scored on the play. Bliss' pass failed to convert the point.

In the third period, Baker returned the kickoff to Norwalk's 20, and he and Bliss lugged the oval to the three, the spot from where Bliss plunged over. Terman kicked the extra point, but it was disallowed as Shelby was penalized for holding.

After a survey of the wooded section south of the city, which has always been good territory for squirrels, and talking with some of the local residents, we find at this time that the best forage for these little animals is the nearby cornfield. Nuts seem to be few and far between this year, however, later they will be working on some of the larger varieties such as walnut and shellbark hickory. The smart thing to do is to visit your favorite hunting grounds before the season opens and find just what sort of a diet Mr. Squirrel is living on and you will be in a better position to bag a few.

London Hears She'll Advocate Concession to Hitler, Calls French Statesmen.

ish postwar colonies.

In France, impatience was expressed over the delay in learning exactly what had transpired at the Berghtesgaden conversations between Chamberlain and Hitler—especially in view of the fact that the conference had been first suggested by France.

France Annoyed.

Some quarters expressed annoyance that Britain was making her own decision before consulting France, which feels that the French cannot take a stand until after they have consulted with Britain.

Opinion in France was sharply divided. One section held that if France is going to fight, she might as well fight now.

Pertinax, well-informed French commentator, whose views often represent those of the French foreign office, warned in the Echo de Paris that granting of Hitler's demands will mean realization of former Kaiser Wilhelm's dream of a "Mittel-Europa" under the domination of Berlin, with the downfall of the French and British empires inevitable if the Democratic powers now capitulate.

Pertinax took sharp issue with observers who believe Britain and France have something to gain by waiting or conceding anything to Hitler.

Other opinion, however, was to the effect that France was prepared to support any compromise suggestions by Chamberlain, even though they eventually go far beyond original French intentions.

It was clear that some French politicians favored "anschluss without plebiscite" if it was necessary to avoid war.

In Germany, little of importance transpired — Hitler was waiting for the British cabinet to come to its decision. He confidently expected that it could be but one thing—complete agreement to his demands.

Those demands were reliably reported as follows:

1—Immediate cession to Germany of Sudeten districts in which 80 per cent or more of the people are German.

2—Sudeten areas in which less than 80 per cent of the people are German, but in which the German proportion is substantial, to be cantonized along the Swiss lines with a large degree of autonomous government.

3—The remainder of the Czechoslovak state to be guaranteed against aggression by international agreement, the guarantors to be Great Britain, Germany, France, and possibly Italy.

4—Czechoslovakia's neutrality in any war to be guaranteed as the neutrality of Switzerland and Belgium are now guaranteed by treaty.

A Farmer's Diary

Hauling Manure.

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I BORROWED my neighbor's two-wheeled trailer to haul out the manure long standing in the stables, upon the field where I hope to plant early potatoes. I put on boots, for in places where the roof had leaked, the rotting heap was soft and wet. Behind the shed the low barnyard was full of black, watery sludge.

It was the rank refuse of sheep, cows and horses. When I dug into it, the odor was in no way like that of a peach orchard. My nostrils reeked with ammonia, as if I had been near an ice machine. Small flies, large flies, and wriggling maggots made some portions seem alive. I was placed in a filthy spot. Yet I remembered Hawthorne pitched such heaps about, derisively calling it his "gold mine;" and I knew that ancient Chinese farmers and those of Europe eagerly seek this form of fertilizer to enrich their soil.

This task that many folks despise is part of a wise nature's plan that nothing should be lost. Dissolved in the good earth, the refuse, filth and decay of all that dwell upon the surface is used again. When I place a portion of this fertilizer on our flower beds next spring when bulbs are planted and seeds are sown, the most beautiful hardy blossoms grow from this treated soil, with delicate colors and fragrance to charm the dullest senses.

From a neighboring swamp I saw a perfect white lily grow. Its roots stood beneath a bubbling, greenish surface that smelled to high heaven. From the slime and cast off waste of earth we get our foods and flowers, through plants that purify the dross of earth and turn it into harvest. I confess that, to me, the strong odor on a cool fall day, of barnyard waste being spread upon a waiting field, is not objectionable, but rather suggests a robust thrift . . . a stalwart, lusty growth that pleases and satisfies.

At the kitchen porch my wife met me, her arms full of clean sundried clothes. I took a towel and a cake of soap and went to bathe in the secluded brook that runs through our pasture. When I returned a half hour later, the task of spreading manure was a well-finished memory.

CHAPTER 44

There was silence in the big, garish room after the kind looking young man had announced he hated Noel's "kind." Noel looked at him speculatively. "Why do you hate my kind?" she asked at last.

The young man moved uneasily in his chair. He looked at her with a frown. "That should be plain enough. You're one of the have's and I'm a have-not."

"Is that any reason for hating me?" she asked, her breath coming a little rapidly.

"Certainly it is, when I can't even get a job," the answer came impatiently.

"Won't you believe that I'm sorry and that I would help if I could?"

The young man gave a coarse laugh. Then he said, "Stop talking. I'm not interested in you, or anything you have to say."

It seemed to Noel that his voice broke ever so slightly as he said those last words. She looked at him for a moment in silence, then said, "You're a college man, aren't you?"

"It might interest you to know that I worked my way through one of the most famous colleges in the United States. When I came out, I thought the world was my oyster. What a laugh!" he broke off again then and exclaimed: "Now, will you please stop quizzing me? I suggest that the best thing you can do is to sit down and keep yourself quiet. If you know what's good for you, that's what you'll do."

* * *

Noel followed his suggestion. She knew he intended to ignore her anyway, even though she would have liked very much to know more about this young man who said he hated her kind. She did not believe he was even one-half as unfriendly toward her as he would have her believe.

He remained sitting quietly in his chair, not moving his head. At last he drew a book from his pocket and began reading. From where she sat, Noel could see that it was a pocket edition on political philosophy.

The day seemed endless although the young man was kind enough to find some books and magazines for Noel to look over. However, when she made any further attempts at conversation, she was firmly rebuffed.

A lunch was brought up, which consisted again of sandwiches. Noel could only make a pretense of eating. The room was so stuffy and she needed fresh air so badly, she was feeling a little sick. She knew it wouldn't do any good to ask for one of the windows to be opened even slightly. But she did get up and walk over to one of them again, and parted the heavy curtains once more.

"Keep away from the window," the young man curtly commanded

Noel came back. She supposed he was afraid she might be seen However, in this remote spot, she hardly believed there was even the barest chance.

* * *

At last it was night. Once again a tray was handed in through the door. This time there was a change. Tea, a thin soup, crackers, a potato salad. Noel tried to eat it, realizing that if by the remotest chance in the world she should see a way to escape, she would need all the strength she could summon. But the food tasted so unsavory, she had to push it from her.

The young man took the tray without question, still not looking at her. He handed it outside and returned to his seat.

Noel at last went back to the divan. Perhaps she dozed a little. She had no way of knowing what time it was, but it seemed hours later when she heard the sound of hurried feet outside mingled with voices. Someone seemed to be having a scuffle.

Then the door was thrown open. Noel sat up on the couch and saw Nick, his hair tousled, and his tie twisted.

He motioned the young man to the door. "Get out!" he ordered in his tight-lipped voice. The boy obeyed.

Nick shut the door behind him, locked it. His breath was coming rapidly and it was some time before he seemed to be able to get his breath.

Noel stood there looking at him with contempt. "So it was you who did this?" She was conscious of a slight relief. She had coped with Nick before. She could do it again.

Nick merely stood there looking at her for a moment without speaking.

"Do you actually believe you can get away with a thing like this?" Noel demanded.

Nick still didn't answer. He was still looking at her.

"Nick, why did you have me brought here? I want to know. What can you hope to gain?" Noel persisted.

"You haven't any idea, have you, Miss Noel Shayne?" Nick's voice suddenly mocked.

"So you do know who I am? And you really are a racketeer, aren't you?"

"One of the best in the profession," Nick admitted boastfully.

"But don't you know all men like you are doomed?" Noel exclaimed. "You can't get away with this."

"I see you read the fairy stories about the G-men," he said with a semblance of a smile.

"I tell you you won't get away with it. If you don't let me go—you're going to be sorry—mighty sorry, Nick," she emphasized.

"Hush!" Nick had one ear turned to the door as if listening for someone outside. Suddenly he said, "We've got to talk fast."

"What do you mean? If it's ransom money, I'll pay it," she said quickly.

Nick looked again toward the door, cautioned her to be quiet, then he said very low, "I suppose you would, and not even miss the money."

"Who told you my identity?"

"A girl by the name of Ruth Chester. Met her one day—knew her slightly—she volunteered the information."

"How soon will you get me away from here?" Noel asked. "I've told you money is no object."

"The money hasn't much to do with it," Nick said very low. "It's the Garwood matter. They'll take the money, however—no reason why they shouldn't."

"Please tell me what you mean," Noel begged.

"They suspect that you know more than I believe you do." Nick said. "That's why it's going to be hard for me—"

He didn't finish. He walked over on tiptoe and listened at the keyhole. Then, apparently reassured, he came back.

"I know nothing of those people," Noel began, "except that the child is not well. I was very anxious about her."

Nick held up a warning finger. Then he said in a loud voice, "All right, Miss Shayne. If you're going to make it difficult, you'll find it to your own disadvantage. If you're willing to see reason, you won't be ill-treated."

* * *

A sudden firm step had sounded outside. "And the sooner you make up your mind, the better. We mean business. Will you get that into your head?" Nick's voice was still loud and emphatic.

It was plain enough now that Nick was talking for the benefit of someone outside. He kept his voice loud enough to be heard on the other side of the door.

Then he spoke again, his voice very low. "I'm not after ransom money. I'm here to get you out of this. You must listen carefully and do exactly as I say. Refuse to sign the ransom note. Keep on refusing. Stall any possible way you can. Deny that you're the right girl. Anything. Tomorrow night at midnight I'll have my plans made. Exactly at 12 o'clock you must let yourself down from the outside of the window. I'll be there to catch you."

Then he said again loudly, "You're stubborn, aren't you?" The next minute he left the room. Noel heard him say, 'She'll do it though it may take time," to someone outside the door.

Was Nick really going to help her, or was it a trick?

LIST FALTERS AS WAR FEARS STALL MARKET

Declines Run From One to More Than Five Points as Traders Watch Europe.

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—The stock market suffered a further break today, with leaders down 1 to more than 5 points at their lows. Selling reflected continued pessimism over the critical European situation and fears of week-end developments.

Trading was at a heavy pace on the decline, the high-speed ticker running 2 minutes late shortly after the opening. Sales in the first hour amounted to 420,000 shares.

Support was met mid-way through the session, but volume contracted on recovery efforts and final quotations found most pivotal issues around the day's bottoms.

Steels, motors, chimicals, coppers and blue-chips were hardest hit by the newest selling wave.

Philip Morris showed an extreme decline of 5½ points, while Westinghouse Electric dropped close to 4 points before meeting support. Allied Chemical, Du Pont, U. S. Rubber and Crucible Steel slumped 3 or more at one time.

Included in the list of representative stocks to give up 2 or more points were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Sears Roebuck, American Smelting, International Harvester, Loew's, Santa Fe and Texas corporation.

THEATER

"Spawn of the North."

A dramatic story of two men whose lifelong friendship is broken by an Arctic feud but who are finally reunited through the terrific sacrifice of one of them is told in "Spawn of the North," opening Sunday at the Madison. The film, with George Raft Dorothy Lamour and Henry Fonda in the leading roles, tells what happens when war hits the fishing country of the archipelago, with fishermen pitted in a life-and-death struggle with salmon pirates. "The Affairs of Annabel," with Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball is playing through today.

* * *

"Carefree."

The endeavors of a psychiatrist to play Cupid and marry off his best friend to a noted actress is the theme of "Carefree," opening as a midnight feature at the Ohio theater at 11:30 today. The scheme, however, runs into unforeseen difficulties when the patient falls in love with her doctor instead of with the man she's supposed to marry. Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers head the cast which includes Ralph Bellamy and Franklin Pangborn. "Mother Carey's Chickens," with Ann Shirley and Ruby Keeler, plays today.

* * *

"52nd Street."

A reissue of "52nd Street" will be one of the Majestic's features beginning Sunday. Ian Hunter Leo Carrillo, Pat Patterson and Kenny Baker top the large cast of the story which unwinds along Manhattan's famous swing street. "Juvenile Court," with Paul Kelly and Frankie Darro, completes the twin bill. The second picture follows the adventures of a group of youngsters who get started on the wrong foot. "You Only Live Once" and "South of Arizona" make up the program today.

* * *

"The Devil's Party."

Victor McLaglen, William Gargan and Beatrice Roberts head the cast in "The Devil's Party," one of the features opening Sunday at the Ritz. It tells of a gang of kids from New York's Hell's Kitchen who grew up in the city, one a priest, two are policemen and another a night club operator. Also on the program is "Everybody Sing" with Allan Jones, Judy Garland and Fanny Brice. Bob Baker in "Outlaw Express." and "Condemned Women" are the current attractions.

EX-ROYAL DRESS DESIGNER IN CITY

Tells of Costumes In Days of Victoria and of Preparing Women For Court.

that the queen was very retired after the death of the Prince Consort.

She said that the queen had actually insisted that none of Albert's possessions or wearing apparel be disturbed during the remainder of her life, and she kept his room always in order.

Mrs. Newstead, who with her husband spends much of her time at their winter home at Lake Worth, Palm Beach, Fla., travels considerably in both England and America. She has a son in New York and another son and daughter in Cleveland where she visits frequently.

The Englishwoman was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Vera Newstead Rowley, who directed the program presented before the Singers club earlier this week.

Mrs. Rowley added occasional bits of information to her mother's comments, explaining more of the attitudes of the British people.

Speaking of the pomp and ceremony of the various courts, Mrs. Newstead contrasted the quiet reserve of Queen Victoria with the later pomp and splendor of the Silver Jubilee of King George and Queen Mary and the coronation of the present king.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Newstead have been closely connected with members of the royal family during their lives, as Mr. Newstead served as a guard of honor to Edward, the former Prince of Wales, during the World war. Speaking of Edward, Mrs. Newstead claimed a feeling similar to that of many Englishmen.

"It was an unfortunate situation," she pointed out.

Both women thought that it was wise Edward had not come to the United States. In their opinion the proposed tour embodied too much "ballyhoo."

Returning to a discussion of her early young womanhood, the Londoner explained that Victoria was tremendously loved by her people, and like the late King George V, set an outstanding example for the people. She did not herself believe in second marriages and frowned upon such procedure by her subjects.

Laughingly Mrs. Newstead explained that there is much confusion in the mind of the average American regarding certain titles of honor. "Lord of the Bath" or "Lord of the Bedchamber" are purely honorary titles bestowed on titled aristocracy, they do not actually draw the bath or turn down beds, she said.

Mrs. Newstead left Mansfield yesterday for New York, and will then leave for Bermuda after which she will join her husband in Florida.

Not That It Matters

Guest Columnist Finds Quaint Quebec Quiet As It Reads About Crisis

—By JANE WILLIAMS

EDITOR'S NOTE: Guest-columning today for Jane Williams is Harold C. McKinley, former News-Journal writer, now a member of the Associated Press staff in Cleveland. With the "Williams Tribe" (oft-mentioned here), the McKinleys are on a vacation tour of Canada.

By HAROLD C. McKINLEY

QUEBEC—(Wednesday)—The war scare takes on a new significance in this ancient, dawdling city. At newspaper offices, where the man on the street gets his news in bulletins hand-printed with crayon and pasted in the windows, small crowds gather to read the latest repercussions from the Hitler Nurnburg speech.

That man on the street reads the briefed developments in the German - Czechoslovakian situation, indulges in a bit of private tongue-clucking and head-shaking, turns away in silence.

There's no outward show of apprehension, no tangible evidence that the Canadian is perturbed about a war in Europe which might involve England and, therefore, him.

While the French and English newspapers carry headlines on war threats, the city of Quebec still dawdles. The motorist here must still yield the right of way to the bicyclist in traffic. The electric observation car—red and gold and uncovered to the night still clangs slowly about the town with the last of the season's tourists. The victorias and cabbies still line the park in front of the Chateau Frontenac.

Only an hour from the city, in rural Quebec, farm wives work beside their husbands in the fields which slope down to the St. Lawrence—and at the end of day watch the sun take a nose-dive into the river with a blinding reflection on the water.

On the surface the scene is peaceful, but there's an undercurrent of uneasiness. The man on the street keeps his vigil at the window where bulletins relay to him developments in the foreign situation. The waiter in the beef - and - kidney - pie restaurant dashes out to read late reports, then dashes down his ale with a wager that an aggressor nation will be taught a thing or three if it comes to war.

And in the silence of that watchful crowd on the curb is seen the fear of what the ominous bickerings may bring.

* * *

On one of the Thousand Islands in the St. Lawrence playground—playground of the playboys of the nineties—stands a monument to the dream of a one-time bellboy and to the "American way" of a half-century ago.

It's the Boldt castle, undertaken but never completed by the late George C. Boldt, who rose from bellhop to owner of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel. A guide relates that the tycoon spent $2,000,000 in construction of the shell of a 360-room castle modeled after a castle on the Rhine, then abandoned the $11,000,000 project when his wife died. It was intended as a gift for her, and in the ornate ceiling of the ballroom her likeness had been cast in plaster. Her portrait was to have been painted in heart-shaped panels in each corner.

It's an old version of the American "success story"—the story of an immigrant youth who dreamed of castles and entertaining princes, and made his dreams come true.

* * *

Things not to be forgotten when a Canadian interlude is ended: In an oak-paneled English restaurant, a gramophone playing a warped record of Hawaiian guitar music . . . In the smelly Bonsecour market of Montreal, the conglomeration of food, clothing, herbs, flowers, pigeons, rugs, yarns—much of it brought by horse and cart from the nearby farms . . . Notre Dame de Bonsecour, the church of mariners, where models of ships saved at sea are suspended from the ceiling and hold candles lighted in gratitude for safe voyages, and where seafaring men go to pray at end of a voyage or the outset of another . . . The peculiar inflection in the French guide's speech which made all his explanations sound like questions, and his ubiquitous "you see?" which punctuated all of his remarks . . . and the steep-roofed, gabled, stone farmhouses of French Canada.

Los Angeles Mayor Loses Recall Election

JUDGE ELECTED IN PROTEST OF BOMB INCIDENT

Executive Ousted as Result of 'Iron Hand' Policies Against Critics.

(By United Press)

LOS ANGELES, — Superior Judge Fletcher Bowron, who had the support of a group of church workers and a vice investigating committee, prepared today to replace Frank L. Shaw as mayor of Los Angeles. Returns from yesterday's special election showed that Bowron had polled almost twice as many votes as Shaw.

Not only was Shaw badly beaten in the race against Bowron, but voters emphasized their disapproval of the city administration by voting almost two to one for Shaw's recall. Voters were called upon to decide the recall issue, as well as to vote for a mayor.

Shaw's name was on the ballot along with those of Bowron and Alonzo H. Riggs. Riggs never was in the race.

Shaw had been re-elected only last year for a second four-year term.

Petitions Circulated.

A movement to recall Shaw started early in the summer, petitions were circulated, and when sufficient names were secured a special election was demanded.

The immediate cause of the circulation of petitions to recall Shaw had been the conviction of Earl Kynette, head of the police intelligence unit, and Roy J. Allen, his aid, in the bombing of Harry Raymond, private vice investigator who frequently criticized the Shaw administration.

Raymond, a former San Diego police chief, had threatened to "expose" Shaw at a bankruptcy hearing. The bombing, severely injuring Raymond, prevented him from testifying at the hearing. It had not been disclosed what Raymond had planned to say. Kynette and Allen are in jail awaiting outcome of their appeals.

At the trials of Kynette and Allen the prosecution charged the intelligence squad was a "secret administration police" to "look after" Shaw's enemies and critics. The squad was disbanded after the policemen's conviction.

Up and Down THE STREET

Mrs. Russell Gimbel of the Friendly House today began her annual search for volunteer workers to assist the regular staff of workers in conducting settlement classes during the fall and winter months. Due to the large enrollment, at least 10 young women will be needed to assist in the work, she says.

When Ellsworth Vines, pro tennis star, stopped overnight in Mansfield last week on his way to the U. S. Amateur golf tournament in Pittsburgh, he was accompanied by a young man named Pat Abbott. At the tourist home where they stayed, Vines was quickly recognized but Abbott's name was unfamiliar. But the operators of the tourist home know who he is today. Abbott yesterday reached the finals in the golf tournament, and today plays for one of the titles. He is a movie extra from Hollywood. Vines, also a crack golfer, failed to qualify for the tournament.

William Painter, employed by the city at the North Main street waterworks pumping station for the past 15 years was claiming some sort of a record today—for Painter was celebrating his 89th birthday "on the job" and he says he doesn't feel a bit older than 21. Fellow workers presented him with gifts.

* * *

Mansfield's young men probably are as brave as any others, but the threats of war in Central Europe are causing a number of the "eligible soldiers" here to wonder if they will have to shoulder a musket and travel across the ocean. The picture in Czechoslovakia is the main topic of conversation when young men get together, and several admit they will sleep better when they are certain the war clouds have passed.

NAZIS QUIETLY PLACE NATION ON WAR BASIS

Doctors Told What Units They Will Report To In Event Of Fighting Orders.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN—Many Jewish physicians, whose licenses had been ordered revoked, have been notified exactly to which military unit they must report in case of war, it was learned reliably today.

The report was taken to indicate the urgency with which Nazi is regard the present crisis arising from German and Czechoslovak differences over minority rights.

(Approximately 6,000 to 7,000 Jewish doctors in Germany were forbidden in a decree Aug. 2 to practice after Sept. 30.)

While Hitler's newspaper mouthpiece stressed suggestions for a Czechoslovak plebiscite to settle the quarrel and repeated the chancellor's sharp words that "behind this warning stands a nation united in spirit and determined in will," Germany continued quietly to put the nation more and more on a war basis.

Workers Get Orders.

Hotels were combed for possible workers on the new system of fortifications on the western frontier across from France. The number of waiters became smaller daily.

Foreign commercial attaches, bankers and economists said they could not explain how Germany has financed her large-scale preparedness measures. They pointed out that new government reports show the foreign trade balance again is turning against Germany but that nevertheless there is no sign of letup in expenditures for war purposes.

While newspaper readers got the impression that armed conflict still was a possibility despite Anglo-German peace negotiations, officially Germany insisted there would not be a war.

Hitler, they said, is determined to keep his country out of war. To many observers it seemed to become clearer hourly that the chancellor expects British and French to help him settle the Czech dispute.

With an eye to possible eventualities, Hitler decided yesterday to increase the number of women who enter labor camps every six months from 30,000 to 50,000.

Similarly, in order to be able to reach all war veterans effectively it was decreed that henceforth there would be only one veterans' organization and that under Nazi party auspices.

DRIVES CAR UP TO CURB, DIES

William D. Mathews, 59, Head Of Mt. Gilead Oil Company, Stricken In Mansfield.

William D. Mathews, 59, of Mt. Gilead, president of the Mathews-Talmadge company, gasoline distributors, died at the wheel of his automobile yesterday afternoon on West Fourth street.

Coroner Hugh C. Winbigler who was called, reported death was due to a heart attack. He said Mr. Mathews apparently felt the attack approaching, pulled to the curb in front of 146 West Fourth street and turned off the ignition key. He was dead before medical aid could be summoned.

Born in Morrow county, Mr. Mathews had lived in Mt. Gilead all his life. He had been in the oil business since 1914 and was distributor of Gulf Refining products in a 12-county district which included Richland county.

Mr. Mathews was a member of the Masonic order at Mt. Gilead, Knights Templar at Marion and the First Presbyterian church at Mt. Gilead.

Surviving are his wife, Alice Wilson Mathews and one son, John, who was associated with him in business, a daughter, Rebecca, Columbus, three sisters, Mrs. Gertrude Williams, Tiffin; Mrs. Laura Stanley, Columbus, Mrs. Edith Barber; and two brothers, E. McMillan of the Baptist church officiating. Burial will be in Riverciff cemetery. The body will be at the Mathews home until 10 a. m. Monday.

CONSTITUTION DAY ADDRESS TO BE GIVEN AT CHURCH TONIGHT

While the nation's patriotic organizations held special programs today in observance of Constitution day, the Mansfield chapters of Daughters of American Revolution and Sons of American Revolution prepared to join in a celebration at 6:30 p. m. at the Grace Episcopal church.

The principal speaker tonight will be William Holsinger, Cleveland, state president of the S.A.R. organization. His topic will be "The Constitution, Our American Conscience."

In a Constitution day address from the White House, President Roosevelt asserted that America's greatest leaders have been those who have sought to make the Constitution workable in the face of new problems and changing conditions.

The president had intended to deliver his addres in person at a celebration of the 150th anniversary of the first state constitutional convention at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., but because of the critical situation in Europe, remained in Washington. He made only a brief reference to the foreign picture.

He said:

"It is with deep personal disappointment that I find the affairs of the world such that I cannot be with my neighbors in Poughkeepsie today."

Combs escaped from the reformatory honor camp at Sandusky Monday. His mother said she had persuaded him to return when he came home after making good his escape.

Glattke explained that because Combs returned of his own volition he will be given only a six months additional time in place of the usual two-year penalty given fugitives.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Pecora Action in Hines Case Looks Like Highly Technical 'Foul' Ruling

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—The mistrial in the Jimmy Hines case before Judge Ferdinand Pecora puts me in mind of the night that Harry Wills was tossed out of the ring and definitely out of the running for the heavyweight championship of the world by a decision of foul in his fight with Jack Sharkey.

Wills, in heavyweight pugilism, like Prosecutor Tom Dewey in New York local and state politics, was a nuisance and a menace. Nobody quite knew how great a menace he was because he had been kept out of important fights by Tex Rickard's gentlemen's agreement with himself that "it wouldn't do the boxing game no good" to have a colored man fight a white man for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Finally, however, he was given a fight with Sharkey, a new boy at the time, and was disqualified for hitting while holding, a technical foul, but common practice in the ring.

The disqualification of Wills eliminated him from the logical contendership or runnerupcy, as the No. 2 ranking among the heavyweights was known at the time. Judge Pecora's decision, throwing Tom Dewey out of the ring, so to speak, may not have the same effect on his future, for he is young and still coming on, whereas Wills was beyond his prime and just hanging around.

*

But, certainly, the Democratic machine of New York city and state, and particularly Tammany Hall, of which Judge Pecora has long been a member, will feel no regret that the Republicans' most promising young aspirant to the governorship lost his most important fight on a highly technical foul which could have been evened up in the scoring.

It is almost impossible for any human being to go through any ordinary day's conduct without committing a technical violation of some ordinance or the spirit of some law, and, similarly, if a judge should sit back, laying for a chance to call a foul on an attorney, especially in a complex trial lasting a month and more, the chance would be bound to come. No case ever would go to the jury.

* * *

Jimmy Hines, the defendant, a Tammany district leader, is one of those standardized metropolitan Honest Johns. His conviction and imprisonment on a charge of protecting the policy racket through his political influence would have been widely deplored among the element who regard personal piety, chastity and boastful open-handedness as coverage for all civic crimes

* * *

This trial contained the elements of a fight for the logical contendership of runnerupcy for the office of governor of New York, and the Republican boy, by a very fastidious application of the rules, was given that which in pugilism is known as the old yo-heave, to the great political detriment of himself and his party. The political consideration is not just something that exists only in my imagination, for it was mentioned by counsel for the defense.

* *

Under the rules of the New York prize fight commission, a fighter could be disqualified for default or foul should he appear in the ring wearing white trunks or should one of his seconds appear in a sweater having a pocket in it

But the customers would consider that such an offense could have no true bearing on the contest, and, considering all the expense to themselves, would be likely to wreck the joint.

The people of New York, in an analogous situation, have shown more restraint They have not undertaken to wreck the edifice of justice but the engineers had better look for cracks around the foundation.
